This was followed by a brief discussion on the SEC, VAC and GE courses provided by the teachers of the English Department for the students from other departments who had joined the meeting. The concerned teachers who taught the papers previously catered to the doubts of the attendees and encouraged them to take the diverse range of interesting papers. Report:

The English Department Association of Janki Devi Memorial College hosted the International Symposium on Indian English Poetry, celebrating the centenary of Nissim Ezekiel's birth on 4 April 2024 in the Seminar Hall. The symposium was compéred by students Debalina Adhikari and Sowparnika MS from the English Department.

The event began with a warm welcome to all present, with Dr Namita Sethi articulating the intent behind the event. She felicitated Professor Swati Pal, who in turn felicitated Professor GJV Prasad, who gave the keynote address. Professor Pal narrated some anecdotes from her student life and teaching days and gave insight into her bond with Professor Prasad. Prof Prasad, in turn, talked about what poetry means to a poet and about appropriating English as our language because one can't write poetry unless one owns the language. In this very engaging talk, he discussed why we use the colonizers' language as a nationalist defensive mode and to assert control over it.

The session was followed by a short tea break, following which we began our next session, Poet Speak with Professor Lakshmisree Banerjee, chaired by Dr Jitender Gill. After introductions and felicitation of the guest and the chair, Professor Banerjee talked about her preference for English over her supposed mother tongue, Bangla. She read aloud several of her poems from her latest collections, Blue Phoenix and Dust Decked Rainbow Quilts.

The third session, Celebrating 100 Years of Nissim Ezekiel: A Tribute, began with felicitation of the guests and the chair. Dr Sethi talked about the legacy of Nissim Ezekiel. Ms Kavita Ezekiel could not join us in person; however, a recorded lecture by her was played on the screen. In the lecture, she recounted her father's days as a student and explored how the man and the poet merged in his personality. His unconventional talent and his role as a father, friend, and leader were uncovered.

The next presenter, Dr Anjana Neira Dev, spoke about the importance of negotiating between tradition and modernity. She believes that the language of food and love has a universality that transcends time and space. She believes that English is her mother tongue. Dr Dev also talked about Ezekiel's collections of poetry. After Dr Dev, we had Dr Achingliu Kamei with us, who talked about how Ezekiel's poetry is so powerful that it has influenced Indian poetic culture. She emphasized how Ezekiel's verses remind one of the diversity and inclusivity in Indian culture. She read Ezekiel's poems Waking, The Second Candle, and The Night and the Scorpion. Dr Kamei talked about the unconventional imagery in Ezekiel's poems and the relevance of his poetry in the contemporary world.

The session was followed by a lunch break in the canteen. After lunch, we resumed the third session, Aspects of Indian English Poetry (I). The speakers for the session were Professor Radha Chakravarty, present in the session offline, with Professor Pramod K Nayar and Professor Anita Nahal joining us online. Dr Payal Nagpal acted as the chair and felicitated the speakers, with Ms Ruchika Bhatia felicitating her. Professor Nayar began the talk by referencing habitat poetry and the roles and consequences of the loss of habits and habitations in Indian English Poetry. The construction of the home, homeliness, and the unhomely in Ezekiel's poems were thoroughly discussed.

After this, we moved on to Prof Anita Nahal who focused on the theme of poetry and women's consciousness. She used a pre-made presentation to explain the mechanism of dreaming in sleep. Prof Nahal talked about how most poetry by women was autobiographical, observational, or confessional. She discussed the legacy of various female poets like Toru Dutt, Sarojini Naidu, Mahadevi Verma, Amrita Pritam, Kamala Das, Laxmi Kanan, Rupi Kaur, etc and how their poems reflect the idea of gender and historicity. She ended the talk by reading aloud her poem, Greatest Warrior is Metamorphic Earth.

After Prof Nahal, Professor Radha Chakravarty graced the occasion with her presence. She started by talking about her book Subliminal. She spoke about how media affects our subconscious mind and the hidden and submerged reality that guides our lives. She also talked a little about Ezekiel. Professor Chakravarty talked about women's bodies as a home and the journey of finding comfort within one's body. She read out her poem Alien, which deals with the same theme. She emphasized how poetry is not only the art of writing and speaking but also of listening.

For our next session on Aspects of Indian English Poetry, we had Dr Vivek Narayanan joining us online and Prof B Mangalam joining us offline. This session was chaired by Dr Sanjukta Naskar and started with an introduction and felicitation of the panelists and the chair. Dr Narayanan started with references to the keynote address by Dr Prasad and added to the importance of English poetry in India. He talked about the rich diversity of Indian culture. Towards the end, Dr Narayanan talked about Dalit poetry in English, which set the momentum for the speech by Prof Mangalam.

Prof Mangalam reflected on her short time as a teacher at JDMC. She talked about her work Being Dalit, Writing English and then shifted to Meena Kandasamy and the radical shift in Dalit poetry in English that she brought about. She read Meena Kandasamy's poem Touch and talked about a couple of her other poems. Prof Mangalam addressed the struggle faced by Dalit writers in being published even in contemporary times and talked about how caste biases have invaded all spaces.

Following this, Ms Ruchika Bhatia concluded the symposium with a vote of thanks. A short tea break was announced, which was followed by an open mic where the students showcased their poetic capabilities and vigor before the symposium finally came to an end. The one-day international symposium was collectively attended by 148 participants in the offline and online mode.

Type of event (intra-college/inter-college/ state/ national or any other collaboration)	Inter college
Objectives of the event:	To introduce the students to the concepts of Green studies and ocean Humanities
Name and Affiliation of the Resource person:	Prof Nandini Sahu

The English Department Association of Janki Devi Memorial College organised the second session in the Writer's Lecture series with Professor Nandini Sahu on the topic "Ecofeminism in Green Studies and Ocean Humanities" in the committee room at 12:45 PM on 23rd November 2023 which was attended by more than 50 participants. The event was anchored by the president of EDA, Ayisha Hima P, with Teacher-in-charge Dr Namita Sethi felicitating the speaker.

Prof. Nandani Sahu introduced the listeners to ecofeminism and elaborated on the perspective of nurturing and preserving nature with the awareness of the term. She especially talked about the connotation of 'folklore' and how people misinterpret it, associating it with music and dance only, while the word has a broader meaning. Professor Sahu explained to the audience how ideas of rewriting history and historical characters (mainly women protagonists) are not well received by most people and taken otherwise. She clarified that through her writings, she is not encouraging women to Fight or rebel for rights, instead opening a new door for them to realize that they are strong enough to protect themselves.

Beautifully, she explained how the different elements and resources are associated with our ancient narratives. She referenced the concept of the Panopticon by Michel Foucault, talking about how many people might be observing one person from all sides in a glass box; however, it can be vice versa, where one person can look back upon everyone from that glass box. She connected the concept with the significant episode of the Mahabharata, the disrobing story of Draupadi. A story that may be about the court of people watching Draupadi being dishonoured can also be understood as a story of the Draupadi watching the people in the court and understanding their true intentions and sentiments.

The session culminated with more such insights, anecdotes, reading of an excerpt from her published book Sita (a poem), and some interesting questions from the spectators.

She encouraged budding writers by sharing her experiences and the plots of her famous novels. She shed light on some of her extensive work on the lives of courtesans of India and talked about how her books have females as the main protagonists and males in supporting roles, unlike the books written and published by various male authors. Dr Dhar also shared her valuable experience and ideas behind writing the renowned short story "A Flute Called Radha" in the anthology Finding Radha: A Quest for Love. Dr Namita Sethi personally recommended the book and even read an extract from the same.

Session on “Mapping the Contours of Caste and Natural Law Theory in Vyasa’s Mahabharata” by Dr Bhavya Arora

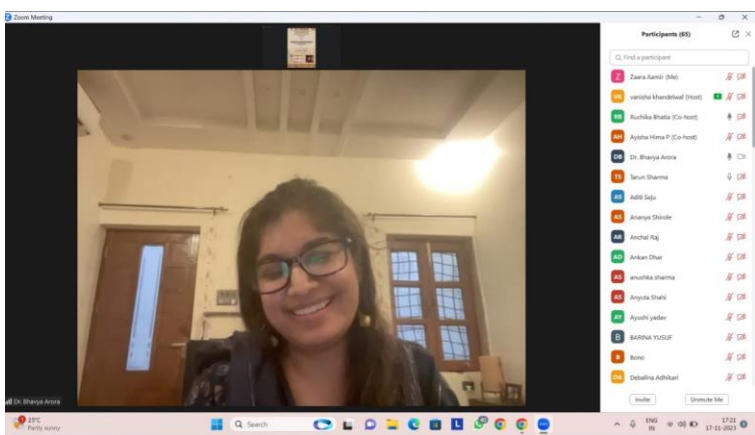

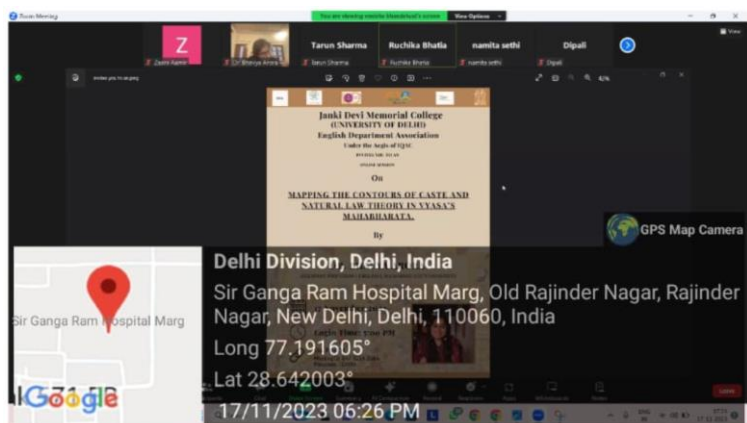

Name of the event:	Mapping the Contours of Caste and Natural Law Theory in Vyasa’s Mahabharata
Name of the organizer (s):	English Department Association: Ms Ruchika Bhatia, Mr Tarun Sharma, Dr Madhulika Nirmal
Type of event (intra-college/inter-college/ state/ national or any other collaboration)	Intra college
Objectives of the event:	Exploration of Mahabharata with a focus on natural law theory, societal reflections, and historical context.
Name and Affiliation of the Resource person:	Dr Bhavya Arora

The English Department Association of Janki Devi Memorial College organized a lecture by Dr. Bhavya Arora on “Mapping the Contours of Caste and Natural Law Theory in Vyasa’s Mahabharata” on 17 November 2023 at 5:30 PM. The event was attended by students across English and other departments, with first-year students outnumbering the others.

Dr Bhavya Arora explored the Mahabharata with a focus on natural law theory, societal reflections, historical context, and the threefold view of caste, gender, and class in the text.

She discussed how the Mahabharata is an example of an open text that allows the audience to come upon different analyses and interpretations. She used the metaphor of old stories like an old wine poured into new bottles to explain how one can insert modern thoughts and ideas in this ancient text to come up with different interpretations and understandings. The Mahabharata acts as a mirror reflecting societal practices and offering lessons on mistakes. Dr Bhavya Arora discussed the unique concept of being 'twice-born' for Brahmins, the challenges faced by marginalized characters like Karna and Hidimbi existing on the outskirts of society, and how the Mahabharata played into certain expectations of its audience. She discussed the values presented in the episodic tales in the Mahabharata, contributing nothing to the larger narrative of the text and what it meant for the society at large.

The English Department Association of Janki Devi Memorial College held a webinar on the indispensable theme of "Soft Skills in the 21st Century" on 20th October 2023 from 6 PM onwards. The webinar was led by Dr Itisha Nagar, a Professor of Psychology from Kamala Nehru College, who acquainted students from varied departments and years with the concept of emotions and the ways we can cope with them.

She engaged with the students in a discussion on the mentioned topics and conducted an activity where the students allotted themselves and their partners a list of adjectives shared on the screen and compared them with each other to understand what they think about themselves and what others think about them converges, and diverges. She used the results of these activities to explain the concept of the Johari Window.

Through the talk, Dr. Itisha Nagar threw light upon the prevalent stereotypes that exist in society and taught the students measures the youth can take to disintegrate them from our societal structure. The session came to an end with an interesting question-answer session where students shared their experiences and took advice on how to work better with feelings and emotions like grief and depression. All the 89 enthusiastic participants gave a very positive feedback on the session.
