Report

The English Department Association of Janki Devi Memorial College, University of Delhi, held a session on “The Map Makers: Remembering Keki N. Daruwalla, Other Indian English Poets, and Contextualising Gender” by Dr Jaydeep Sarangi, the principal of New Alipore College in Kolkata on 23rd October 2024 from 12:00 PM to 2:00 PM in the committee room. The third-year student, Debalina Adhikari, was the anchor for the event.

The session traced the emergence of Indian English poetry within Indian history. Dr Jaydeep Sarangi walked the audience through the beginning of Indian writing in English before expanding on the contributions of poets from different corners of India in shaping Indian poetry in English as it exists today. An important element of the discussion were the critics of Indian English poetry, and the “sponsored history” taught in institutions.

Dr. Sarangi emphasised the act of rising in love, not falling in love, with poetry, taking examples of Sangam literature and the north-eastern poet Mamang Dai, to shed light on marginalised, non-mainstream cultures in poetry. According to him, a poem “speaks” to the reader and the emotional intensity of each poem varies. He thus encouraged the audience to read more poems and read them closely, word by word, diving fully into the madness of passion.

Dr. Sarangi ended his talk with a recital of three of his poems, gifting Sahitya Academy’s anthology on contemporary Indian English Poetry, titled Mapping the Mind Minding the Map, of which he was a co-editor, and his own poetry anthology, Memories of Words, to the college library. After his talk, students and faculty members raised various questions on the topic of Indian English Poetry to Dr. Jaydeep Sarangi who shared his insights on the same.

The English Department Association of Janki Devi Memorial College, University of Delhi, conducted an online session on the topic: “Studying Abroad isn't Expensive: It’s Rewarding” in collaboration with the organisation EduGuide Global Consultants on 19th October, 2024 on Zoom. Mr. Rahul Dutt and Ms. Suchi Aggarwal, representatives of the EduGuide Global Consultants, were the speakers for the event. Gauri Wadehra, a second-year student was the anchor for the same.

The session began with a formal welcome to the guest speakers, and the introduction of the topic. Mr. Rahul then took over and expanded on the topic by first considering the educational budget, and then the time frame of applications required for various universities, and how these criteria may change depending upon the country one considered. The speakers deconstructed the various elements of university applications, including competitive exams, essays, LORs, etc. They also provided an in-depth explanation of the various scholarships available in different universities across the globe.

It was an interactive session, with the stage open to questions and enquiries from the attendees. The speakers helped the students solve any queries they had, including, but not limited to, questions regarding Ivy League colleges, streams/courses available after an undergraduate degree in English, option of majors and minors in Masters Degree, and importance of extracurriculars.

Students from various departments joined the event and were enlightened by the content of the lecture. The session ended with a final questions and answers round, after which the anchor, Gauri Wadehra, gave a vote of thanks.

Report:

The English Department Association of Janki Devi Memorial College, University of Delhi, held a hybrid session on JDMC's founder, Brij Kishan Chandiwalwa's books - Dilli ki Khoj (trans. In Search of Delhi) and Bapu ke Charnon Mein on 19th September, 2024 from 10:00 AM to 12:00 PM in the Committee room. Professor Mythili Kaul headed the lecture, standing as a guest of honour, sharing her insights on Brij Kishan Chandiwalwa's works and her own experiences meeting him, and talking to him and Gandhiji once as a young girl growing up in Delhi in pre-independent times.

The session began with Dr Gill introducing Chandiwalwa's life, books, and adherence to Gandhian principles. Prof. Sudha Upadhyay from the Hindi department, then provided insights into Bapu ke Charnon Mein, having read this rare and hard-to-find book by virtue of receiving its hardcover as an award during her graduation. Following this, Professor Mythili Kaul started a detailed discussion on how Brij Krishan Chandiwalwa embarked on writing the book, Bapu Ke Charno Mein, sharing and analysing her favourite instances from the text. Following the discussion on Brij Kishan Chandiwalwa's relationship with and notes on Gandhi, Dr. Gill segued into his other book, Dilli Ki Khoj, and how he paints a picture of Delhi, its culture and history despite not being a trained historian, talking about his deep love for the city and how it shines through in his work. Following this, Dr Gill and Dr Namita Sethi talked about their experiences translating the book, and had an insightful discussion with Professor Kaul about what the book says and represents.

The session ended with a few words of appreciation from our principal, Professor Swati Pal and a vote of thanks.

Name of the organiser:	English Department Association, Ms. Ruchika Bhatia, Mr. Tarun Sharma

Report:

The English Department Association of Janki Devi Memorial College, University of Delhi, organised a Foundation Lecture on “The Greek Epic”, by Dr Jitendra Gill, for the first-year students on 13th September, 2024 from 12:00 PM to 1:00 PM in room number 13.

Dr. Gill began the lecture by diving into what makes an epic, especially in the Western Homeric context. She utilised visual resources, showing an ancient map to help the students understand the background and setting of the texts they were studying, and explaining how, where, how and why one travelled in Ancient Graeco-Roman times. After explaining the contexts, Dr Gill segued into Homer and his contributions to the format of the Western epic - epic conventions and the techniques of writing an epic that he invented and popularised to the point that we can see them being used to this day.

The event ended with a question-and-answer session where Dr. Gill clarified all remaining doubts of the students attending the lecture and told them about the podcast, she had worked on recently with the 2nd year student, Gauri Wadehra, where they dug deeper into Homer and his contributions to the epic format, which is available on the college website.

Types of Epic

- In A Preface to Paradise Lost, C.S. Lewis distinguishes between primary and secondary epic poetry:
- Primary epic—poetry "which stems from heroic deeds and which is composed in the first instance, in order that such deeds may not be forgotten." It is practical in purporting to record historical events and deals with the real world, "however much glamour may be added in the process."
- Secondary epic—poetry which may deal with "heroic legend or with more abstract themes than the type available to primary epic, and which is composed, not as an historical record of the past, but as the poet's artistic interpretation or recreation of legend or theme. The combination of the poet's 'seeing eye' and his personal style together create something which is not based on reality but has a life of its own to be transmitted to the mind of the reader."

Definition of an Epic

- + Epic is a long narrative poem on a subject of great magnitude and cultural and historical significance, related in an elevated style, and centered on a demigod or quasi-divine figure, on whose actions the fate of a society or the human race depends, according to M.H Abrams.
- + Traditional epics were recited by bards and dealt with historical and legendary materials deriving from oral tradition. (The Iliad, The Odyssey, The Ramayana and The Mahabharata).
